

Back to Square One.

Titchy suit slacks says with Labour we'll be back to Square One. Personally I dream of being back to square one, rather than the Dystopia squared we presently inhabit

Under square one there were no vast increases in waiting lists in the NHS. We could always see a doctor, or a dentist. NHS was not down on its knees, ambulances were not queuing outside hospitals for hours waiting to be admitted, only to debunk patients into corridors. There were no children in abject poverty, none with rickets or scurvy. There were no food banks or the need for warm places to attend to keep warm. People did not have to choose between eating or heating. Folks did not have their homes broken into to install Pay as You go Meters. Schools were not crumbling, leaking and in dangerous conditions. We did not have our seas and rivers inundated with illegal sewage and toxic contaminates. There was not a total decline in social services over the 14 years of this corrupt, inept, dysfunctional, incompetent and chaotic Government. We did not have lorries queuing for days just to get to Dover. Firms did not have so much paperwork and bureaucracy because of "Brexit". We did not vote to pauper ourselves with Brexit. We could come and go to Europe without having to queue endlessly to have our passports examined. We were not overwhelmed with inflation and the cost of living. Families were not thrown out of rented accommodation on section 21 at the whim of landlords. We did not have so many people sleeping rough in our streets, a lifestyle choice according to our sacked home secretary. We did not have 49ner Prime Minister Liz Trust and Kamikarsi Chancellor tanking the economy, with inflation interest and mortgage rates climbing northwards, causing home owners large increases in their mortgages. Then there is the farce of HS2, and pot holes large enough to swim in. Smart Motorways which instead were stupid and dangerous. Strikes by Barristers, Teachers, Nurses, Doctors, Consultants and Transport workers. All these were unknown to square one. What about the scandal of PPE. for hospitals.

I could give countless more reasons such as politicians and the elite being ennobled for lying and corruption, ie. Baroness Mone. Others donating vast amounts to the Tory Party to purchase peerages. We did not have people needlessly dying during the Covid Pandemic. and what about "Partygate" We did not have the Government involved with the PO scandal only because "titchy suit slacks" wants to look good for the General Election. QED why going back to Square One would be the better alternative, so come on let us get back to Square One, let us get Square One done..
